

ISBN: 9781917455039

November 2024

Category: Fiction

Paperback, 216mm x 140mm

404 pages, £11.99

Quiet Echoes at Night

L.G. JENKINS

- With everything you love in a dystopia, the third gripping instalment of the dystopian fantasy series readers can't put down. Are you willing to be Unworthy?

Tensions ignite across the City, dark secrets have been unearthed. Confronted by soul-shattering adversities Ajay and Genni embark on a turbulent quest where multiple lives intertwine and the battle for existence demands physical and emotional transgression. Every Watch is under constant scrutiny. The price of resistance is severe. In Tulo City even the smallest actions can spark the most profound change.

- Determined and full of conviction, Genni Mansald is ready to rebel. After uncovering evidence about Command's oppressive regime, Genni embarks on a dangerous rescue mission — but she can't do it alone. Abandoning her Worthy status, the stakes escalate rapidly. Forging a risky alliance with a charming Unworthy, Genni's desperate efforts to bring change could prove disastrous. Her character, tested to the limits. Her resilience pushed to breaking point as she fights to save an innocent family.

- In the silence of the desert, Ajay Ambers clings on to his life. Fighting to exist in the cruel and malignant landscape. Faced with emotional revelations from his painful past, Ajay uncovers a mysterious device that reshapes his comprehension and forces him to confront his grief. Unearthing discoveries with potentially huge repercussions that could reshape all of Tulo.

- Are you willing to be Unworthy? Are you ready for revolution? Can we break the regime and fight to find true value? Lose yourself in this immersive dystopian narrative that reminds you what truly matters.

AUTHOR BIO

Lydia Jenkins is an author, booklover and coffee drinker. When she isn't immersed in writing dystopian worlds, you'll either find her reading in a coffee shop, playing netball or spending time with friends in 'sunny' England.

malcolm down
PUBLISHING